Avian Flu

Risks at the workplace

Different types of flu

- Classic, seasonal human flu

There is a flu epidemic every year due to the human form of the Influenza virus of the Orthomyxovirus genus. A relatively high number of people are affected by this epidemic and the severity varies according to virus mutation, the speed and extent of it, and immunity levels in those affected.

This flu can be prevented by the classic, seasonal flu vaccination.

How to wash your hands properly

Washing your hands frequently and carefully is the most effective way of preventing the spread of gastro-enteritis, flu and other viral or bacterial infections.

- Being responsible
- Wet your hands and squeeze some liquid soap into your palm
- Lather for at least 20 seconds, following the 6 stages below:

1. Rub palms together
2. Rub the back of the left hand with the right
3. Rub the back of the right hand with the left
4. Rub the palms together with fingers interlaced
5. Rub the right thumb against the palm of the left hand and vice versa
6. Rub the tips of the fingers against the palm of the opposite hand

- Rinse the hands thoroughly up towards the wrists
- Dry the hands and wrists thoroughly with a disposable towel and use the towel to turn off the tap so that you don't touch it with your hand.
